Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy (FOIP) Act

Transitory Records are records in any format that are only required for a limited (short) time period to complete a routine action or to help prepare a final version business document (final business decision). They are often only kept for reference purposes for an immediate, or minor, transaction.

Examples of Transitory Records
- Advertising Material (Outdated)
- Books (Pamphlets, Magazines, Ephemera)
- Copies (Photocopies or when Final Record is held in another Business Unit)
- Drafts (Draft Decisions or Draft Deliberations)
- Emails (Helpdesk Tickets, CC’s (FYI’s), Newsletters, Personal Emails)
- Forms (Blank or Outdated)
- Receipts or Invoices already processed by Financial Services
- Records containing data already entered into Banner

Destroying Transitory Records
- Transitory Records can be destroyed/deleted when they are no longer needed for reference for your business.
- Transitory Records can be destroyed/deleted as needed without relying on the MRU Records Retention Schedule (outlines legal retention lengths).
- 1 year after a decision is made about an individual is recommended.

The Benefits
- Eliminating Transitory Records maintains a clean-efficient workspace.
- Regularly shredding/deleting Transitory Records helps lower the risk of unauthorized access to personal information. (Privacy Breach Mitigation)

Protecting Personal Information: Always shred, or delete, records containing personal information in a secure manner.

Always use shredding machines and ensure your computer trash can is empty.

Official Business Records are those University records that generally represent the first complete and final record, which are able to produce the consequences intended by its author or creator.

Official Business Records must be filed, classified and retained based on the MRU Records Retention Schedule. (See MyMRU > Employee Tab > FOIP > See Also)
- They are required, and maintained, to support business operations.
- They document, and provide, evidence of business transactions.
- They are required by legislation.
- They are retained to protect the rights of citizens and/or the University.
- They provide evidence of compliance and accountability or other specialized business requirements.
- They have some future business, financial, legal or archival value to the University.
Transitory Records Decision Diagram

The diagram below can help you identify records that are considered “Transitory”, and therefore, can be shredded or securely deleted.

Step 1
Evidence of a Business Activity?

- Does the record (electronic or paper) document or provide evidence of a business activity, decision or transaction related to the functions and activities of MRU?

Step 2
Short-term Value, Copy or Draft?

- Does the record contain information that is of only short-term business value and won’t be required in the future?
- Is it a duplicate (or cc’d) that was circulated to you strictly for reference purposes? Has the master copy of the record/email been filed?
- Is it a draft version of a document that will have no further value once it is updated?
- Is there a final version of the record already filed?

Step 3
Final Record of a Business Decision?

- Is it needed to support business activities and final decisions?
- Does it protect the rights of individuals?
- Does it provide evidence of compliance with accountability or other business requirements?

It’s a Transitory Record
(Securely dispose of it: Shred or Delete permanently)

It’s an Official Record

Print, File and Manage records according to the MRU Records Retention Schedule.

Destroy the records based on legal retention period. Business Units keep a record of destruction.
