

CCDR

Centre for Community Disaster Research

Presents

Now Where Are We Supposed To Live? How Natural Disasters Make Housing Inaccessible

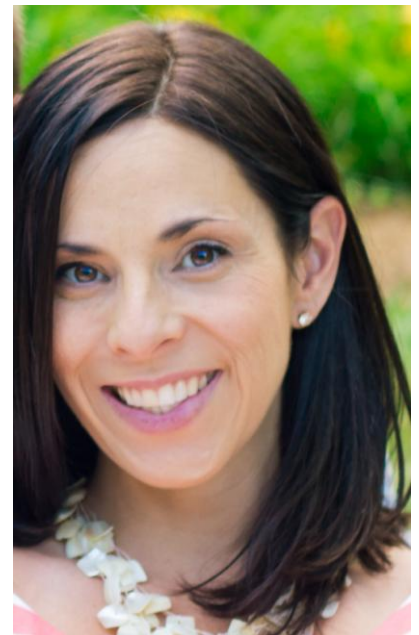

Friday October 14th, 2016 at 12:00 – 1:30 PM
Ross Glen Hall (EC 1040)

With

Jeannie Haubert,

Associate Professor and Chair of Sociology and Anthropology
at Winthrop University in Rock Hill, South Carolina

Jeannie Haubert is Associate Professor and Chair of Sociology and Anthropology at Winthrop University in Rock Hill, South Carolina. She studies racial and ethnic relations, social inequality, disasters, and immigration. Dr. Haubert earned her Ph.D at Tulane University in New Orleans in 2007. She is the sole editor of “Rethinking Disaster Recovery: A Hurricane Katrina Retrospective” published in February of 2015. Beyond her book, Dr. Haubert has published journal articles on attitudes toward immigrants in International Migration Review, on race-based housing discrimination in Organization and the Environment, and on international service learning in Humanity and Society. She has also contributed several chapters to edited volumes on housing discrimination following disasters and neoliberal urban revitalization strategies. Her current research involves comparative case studies of housing access following natural disasters with a particular focus on how historically marginalized groups are affected.

Refreshments and light snacks provided.