

SDG Student Coordinator

Emma Berger

As a values-driven leader, Emma Berger has worked to establish the MRU Sustainable Development Goals (SDG) Hub with the goal of guiding students in creating campus action projects on social and environmental issues. The hub's essence is shaped by her core values, which include collaboration, transparency, accessibility, inclusivity, accountability, and impact. Emma is intentional about centering member interests and ideas, creating a truly collaborative, inclusive, and open structure that is conducive to changemaking.

Emma is graduating with an honours degree in psychology and a minor in social innovation. Through social innovation, they discovered systems thinking, which enhanced their values of diverse perspectives and creating connections, and helped them assist others more strategically and streamlined using systems principles to make a larger impact. Emma has participated in Map the System, winning the MRU final, and in the Catamount Fellowship where they explored partnerships with the SDGs in a university context.
