

Podcast Episode: Democratizing the Future

Mofe Adeniran

Mofe Adeniran is currently pursuing a degree in Journalism and Digital Media at Mount Royal University (MRU). This past year, Mofe participated in Catamount, a fellowship for emerging changemakers, offered through the Institute for Community Prosperity. The fellowship is one part community-partnered research and one part transformational learning. Diving into social innovation frameworks, experiential learning and deep listening with community, students explore the root causes of community-identified ecological, social, economic, and cultural issues.

As part of the fellowship, Mofe created this podcast. In this episode, we explore a wide range of topics, including accents, the future of belonging and futures literacy. Our guest is Moussa Magassa, the Associate Vice President of Equity, Diversity, and Inclusion at MRU. Don't miss out on this enlightening discussion.

This episode features Music by Nesrality and OYStudio from Pixabay. The tracks are titled Instrumental Jazz 1, Full Album, Trygve Larsen -Autumn Leaves Falling Again -Jazz Piano and Hip-Hop Bach.
